One of my earliest memories of reading MAD Magazine was my mother taking them away from me and hiding them around the house, claiming they were inappropriate and I was too young to be reading such filth.

My dealer, aka father, grew up reading MAD and National Lampoon and didn't see the harm in letting an impressionable young mind be introduced to the likes of Alfred E. Neuman, Spy vs Spy, and the scribbles of Sergio Aragonés. Little did he know I was actually destined to become a doctor, saving millions of lives after I discovered the cure for cancer. Instead, after letting MAD Magazine slowly rot my brain over the past few decades, here I am editing a comic book that I'm giving away for free, costing me financially and emotionally. Maybe my mother was right after all?

While I'm not old enough to have grown up with Classic MAD, the stuff they were publishing in the 90s had me hooked for life. Over the years I would discover back issues at conventions and comic book shops, or even the big collections they put out with material from every era. These were the ancient texts that I studied from, making me one of the coolest boys at school that never got beat up or bullied. Later when I eventually graduated from college, I taped on my cap in giant letters, "WHAT, ME WORRY?" to show the world I was ready for anything!

After the tremendous success of last year's FREE COMIC BOOK DAY issue, I knew I had to up the ante this year, and what better way than to publish a Tribute to MAD Magazine? When I opened submissions in September, a majority of creators were ecstatic to participate, while others lost any remaining respect they had for me. I had to scroll through an overflowing inbox, carefully selecting who I felt would be the best fit for the issue. I wanted to make sure we had homages to the writers, artists, covers, back covers, and comics of MAD Magazine that shaped us, and I'm pretty proud of my "Unusual Gang of Idiots" (what I'm calling them to avoid WarnerMedia's lawyers).

I'd like to thank the numerous comic shops that have helped support CLUSTERFUX COMIX over the years, keeping issues stocked on the shelves and putting up with me. That's why I started the FCBD issue last year, to give them something to give away to their customers as a 'thank you.' I just hope that this year's issue won't cause as much spewing and vomit!

Stupidly yours,

Cameron Hatheway, Head Honcho

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF...ONLINE

Being online is great, Joey!
You can be anybody you want!
Make up a persona!
Explore your dark side!
Do whatever! Nobody IRL will know who you are!

But all you're doing is posting the city's new garbage collection schedule..

Exactly! I'd never be so helpful IRL!

I've had enough!
If you don't turn off
that online game and
come to bed with me
this instant, we are through, Samuel!

Computer, re-install
"dream GF widget, version 2"

Now, Susan, I've moved on and I think you ought to do the same.

WiFi, food delivery, next day
shipping, VR simulators, downloadable content, social media...Why would anybody
ever leave their house?

That's easy, Hank - Nobody's got a house...

...And nobody can stand
to stay in these crummy apartments
all day!
